Voice of “Ray” in “Kaijudo: Clash of the Duel Masters”

Scott Wolf stars as “Ray,” a 14-year-old boy who possesses the rare ability to befriend and duel alongside fantastical creatures from a parallel dimension in “Kaijudo: Clash of the Duel Masters” on the Hub Network. Stephen Davis is executive producer of “Kaijudo: Clash of the Duel Masters” from Hasbro Studios.

On the silver screen, Wolf’s diverse credits include “White Squall” with Jeff Bridges and Ryan Phillippe, “Emmett’s Mark” opposite Gabriel Byrne, “Go” with Katie Holmes and Jay Mohr and “The Evening Star” opposite Juliette Lewis and Shirley MacLaine.

Best known for his role as “Bailey Salinger” on the Golden Globe® Award-winning drama “Party of Five,” Wolf has been a mainstay on television for more than a decade, including a starring role in “Everwood,” opposite Treat Williams and “V.” Recently, Wolf was cast in a recurring role on “Perception” opposite Eric McCormack.

In addition to his extensive work on screen and TV, Wolf’s stage work includes the Tony Award® winning “Side Man,” the Broadway production of “Observe the Sons of Ulster Marching Towards the Somme,” and three seasons at the prestigious Williamstown Theater Festival.

Wolf currently resides in Los Angeles with his wife Kelley and two sons.
