Christian Jacobs

Executive Producer / “The M.C. Bat Commander” on “The Aquabats! Super Show!”

Creator and Executive Producer Christian Jacobs stars as “The M.C. Bat Commander,” the fearless frontman and leader of The Aquabats! in “The Aquabats! Super Show!” on the Hub Network. “The Aquabats! Super Show!” from AWESOME FORCES! Productions is executive produced by Jacobs and fellow show creator Jason deVilliers (“The Flyboys”), along with Donna Ebbs and Nate Rogers.

“The Aquabats! Super Show!” is based on the misadventures of the real-life rock band The Aquabats! that Jacobs co-founded with fellow Aquabat Chad Larson (aka “Crash McLarson”) in 1994. Jacobs is also lead singer of the band, and performs under the stage persona of “The M.C. Bat Commander,” the same character he currently portrays on the live-action series. “The Aquabats! Super Show!” may be the first television show in history that stars an actual garage band of non-actor musicians in completely fictional and fantastical comedy situations. The live-action show also features cartoons, commercial parodies and original songs written by Jacobs and the band. The series received a 2013 Daytime Emmy® Award nomination for Outstanding Children’s Series.

Jacobs’ previous credits include Nickelodeon’s award-winning children’s series “Yo Gabba Gabba!,” on which he serves as a creator, writer, director, composer and voice actor. For his work on “Yo Gabba Gabba!,” Jacobs has received a BAFTA award, consecutive TCA awards, the Fred Rogers Innovation Award, the Parent’s Choice Award, numerous Emmy® Award nominations, and has been featured in Time magazine’s “Top 10 Television” list.

Jacobs currently resides with his family in Orange County, Calif.
