“Eaglebones Falconhawk” on “The Aquabats! Super Show!”

Ian Fowles stars as “Eaglebones Falconhawk,” a superhero with a laser blasting guitar and an invisible spirit bird known as “The Dude,” in “The Aquabats! Super Show!” on the Hub Network. Christian Jacobs (“Yo Gabba Gabba!”), Jason deVilliers (“The Flyboys”), Donna Ebbs, and Nate Rogers are executive producers of “The Aquabats! Super Show!” from AWESOME FORCES! Productions.

“The Aquabats! Super Show!” is based on the misadventures of the real-life rock band The Aquabats! that Christian Jacobs co-founded in 1994 and which Fowles joined in 2006.

Besides starring in “The Aquabats! Super Show!,” Fowles also serves as a composer and musician for the series. Fowles’ first television appearance was in a 2007 episode of Nickelodeon’s “Yo Gabba Gabba!” as a guest star on their ‘cool tricks’ segment and has also worked on that series as a production assistant and musician.

Fowles has played guitar and bass in professional rock bands for over 17 years. He is left-handed, and currently plays a Fender Squier Jazzmaster guitar with The Aquabats! live. Fowles started playing guitar in his early teens and has since played with bands such as Death by Stereo, Sense Field and Further Seems Forever.

Fowles holds a master’s degree in Cultural Studies from Claremont Graduate University where he is currently pursuing a doctorate in Religious Studies.

Fowles grew up in Yorba Linda, Calif. and married in 2009.
