LOVE & HATE CRIME // A Murder in Mississippi

One-Hour Special Premieres Sunday, October 13 at 10/9c

In June 2011, a group of young white teens drinking and partying in Rankin County, Mississippi, decided to "mess with" African Americans in nearby Jackson. James Craig Anderson became the group's target, as the teens ran down Anderson with their car—killing him in the process. Condemned as a modern-day lynching, the act was a sign that hatred based on race is alive and well in the United States. With racial tensions dominating political debate, monopolizing newspaper headlines and dividing communities, this timely documentary series investigates one of the first crimes to be prosecuted under federal Hate Crime laws.

So when the status update "That bitch is dead" appeared on Dee Dee's Facebook on June 14th, 2015, friends and neighbors were perplexed. Or something altogether more sinister?
